

40 Days of Prayer & Devotion to Easter

Day 22

How you live, the choices you make, and your relationship with Christ have a bearing on those around you. If you are endeavoring to live a righteous life, then there is a canopy like a fruitful tree that extends to those who are near you. In Proverbs, it says the fruit of our righteous living can be a “tree of life” to others.

This means our lives are much more than just blessings and encouragement to those we know. The verse goes on to say that we can and should see “souls won” because of Godly wisdom. Does your relationship with the Lord produce “life” for those around you? Do the decisions and choices you make in your life result in changed lives around you?

Often, we live our lives in Christ forgetting that a lost and dying world all around us are watching. What are they experiencing because of “how” we are living? I pray that you and I would live in such a manner that others would desire to have this life that we have in Christ. Their desire, in part, because of our example, might just be the very thing that the Lord uses to “save their soul,” for all eternity.

Let's #liveoutward in such a manner that folks will see Jesus!

The fruit of the righteous is a tree of life, And he who is wise wins souls.
